Code of Conduct

Code of Conduct

Acknowledgement – November 2020

Te Kaunihera Manapou Paramedic Council acknowledges the Nursing Council of New Zealand for authority to adapt its Standards of Conduct, which in turn was informed by Codes of Conduct by the UK Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC), the Australian Nursing and Midwifery Council (ANMC), the Medical Council of New Zealand (MCNZ), the Australian Medical Council (AMC) and the Midwifery Council of New Zealand.

Introduction

Te Tiriti o Waitangi forms the basis for ongoing relationships in Aotearoa New Zealand and affirms the rights of iwi, hapū and Māori in the shaping and governance of our nation. It also influences our roles and responsibilities as citizens in our community and how we conduct ourselves and behave in our professional settings. Te Kaunihera Manapou Paramedic Council recognises its responsibilities to meet its obligations under Te Tiriti o Waitangi and confirms its commitment to this.

Te Kaunihera Manapou Paramedic Council ('the Council') under the Health Practitioners Competence Assurance Act 2003 ('the Act') is the responsible authority that governs the practice of paramedics. The principal purpose of the Act is to protect the public's health and safety by providing mechanisms to ensure health practitioners are competent and fit to practise their professions. The Council sets and monitors standards in the interests of the public and the profession. The Council's primary concern is public safety. This Code outlines the standards of ethical conduct set by the Council under section 118(i) of the Act.

This Code complements the legal obligations that paramedics have under the Act, the Health and Disability Commissioner (Code of Health and Disability Services Consumers' Rights) Regulations 1996 and the Health Information Privacy Code 1994. The Act and Code of Rights can be found at <http://www.legislation.govt.nz>.

The Code of Conduct is a set of standards defined by the Council describing the behaviour or conduct that paramedics are expected to uphold. The Code of Conduct provides guidance on appropriate behaviour for all paramedics and can be used by health consumers, paramedics, employers, the Council and other bodies to evaluate the behaviour of paramedics. Failure to uphold these standards of behaviour could lead to a disciplinary investigation.

Paramedics are expected to uphold exemplary standards of conduct while undertaking their professional role. Because paramedics must have the trust of the public to undertake their professional role, they must also have a high standard of behaviour in their personal lives.

This Code is the overarching document that describes professional conduct. Other documents will provide more detailed guidance on specific conduct areas (such as social media, and professional boundaries).

This is not a Code of Ethics – it does not seek to describe all the ethical values of the profession or to provide specific advice on ethical issues, ethical frameworks or ethical decision making. This type of advice is provided by professional organisations.

While mandatory language such as 'must', 'shall' and 'will' has restricted use throughout this Code, it is important for paramedics to understand there is an expectation that they will adhere to these standards.

The term 'health consumer' has been used throughout this document as it is used in the Act. It means an individual who receives paramedic care or services. This term represents patient, client, resident, or disability consumer.

Framework of the code: eight principles

These principles are based on the values underpinning professional conduct and are of equal importance.

- Principle 1 Respect the dignity, individuality and rangatiratanga (self-determination) of health consumers
- Principle 2 Identify and respect the cultural needs and values of health consumers
- Principle 3 Work in partnership with health consumers to promote health equity and protect their well-being
- Principle 4 Maintain health consumer trust by providing safe and competent care
- Principle 5 Respect health consumers' privacy and confidentiality
- Principle 6 Work respectfully with colleagues to best meet health consumers' needs
- Principle 7 Act with integrity and authenticity to achieve health consumers' trust
- Principle 8 Maintain public trust and confidence in the paramedic profession

Values underpinning professional conduct

Respect

Treating health consumers, whānau/families and colleagues with respect enables paramedicine relationships that support health consumers' health and well-being. Treating someone with respect means behaving towards that person in a way that values their cultural context, worth, dignity and uniqueness. It is a fundamental requirement of professional paramedicine relationships and ethical conduct.

Trust

Paramedics are privileged in their relationships with health consumers. Paramedics need to establish trusting relationships with health consumers to effectively provide care that involves touch, using personal information, emotional and physical support, and comfort. Health consumers need to be able to trust paramedics to be safe and competent, not to harm them and to protect them from harm. They need to trust paramedics to work in the interests of their health and well-being. Paramedics must be trustworthy and maintain the public's trust in the paramedic profession.

Partnership

Partnership occurs when health consumers are given sufficient information, in a manner they can understand, in order to make an informed choice about their care and treatment, and are fully involved in their care and treatment. Their cultural context, independence, views and preferences are valued. Paramedics must be aware of the inherent power imbalance between themselves and health consumers, especially when the health consumer has limited knowledge, may be vulnerable or is part of a marginalised group.

Integrity

Being honest, acting consistently and honouring our commitments to deliver safe and competent care is the basis of health consumers' trust in paramedics. Integrity means consistently acting according to values and principles and being accountable and responsible for our actions. As professionals, paramedics are personally accountable for actions and omissions in their practice and must be able to justify their decisions.

Establishing relationships of trust with health consumers

- It is important to establish a relationship of trust with each health consumer by being honest, acting consistently and delivering safe and competent care. Make their care your first concern.
- Treating health consumers with respect includes treating them politely and considerately, and valuing their dignity, culture and individuality.
- Working in partnership includes listening to them and responding to their concerns and preferences where practicable and giving them relevant information so they can make decisions.
- Acting with integrity means being consistent with paramedic values and principles, taking steps to reduce risk or harm to health consumers and not abusing your position of trust.

Principle 1 – Respect the dignity, individuality and rangatiratanga (self-determination) of health consumers

Standards

- 1.1 Respect the dignity of health consumers and treat them with kindness and consideration. Identify yourself and your role in their care.
- 1.2 Take steps to ensure the physical environment allows health consumers to maintain their privacy and dignity.
- 1.3 Respect the rangatiratanga (self-determination) of health consumers by listening and asking, respecting their views about their health, and responding to their concerns and preferences where practicable.
- 1.4 Work in partnership with the whānau/family of the health consumer where appropriate and be respectful of their role in the care of the health consumer.
- 1.5 Treat health consumers as individuals and in a way they consider to be culturally safe.
- 1.6 Practise in a way that respects difference and does not discriminate against those in your care on the basis of ethnicity, religion, gender and gender identity, sexual orientation, political or other opinion, disability or age.
- 1.7 Ensure you provide care to your best ability, regardless of the cause of the health consumer's condition or any factors that may have contributed to their condition.
- 1.8 Ensure that you do not impose your political, religious and cultural beliefs on health consumers, and intervene if you see other health team members doing this.
- 1.9 If you object to providing reproductive health services, on the ground of conscience, you must inform a health consumer who asks you to provide this service that they can obtain the service from another health practitioner or from a family planning clinic. You must inform the health consumer how to access the contact details of the closest provider of the service requested. A conscientious objection does not override a health practitioner's professional and legal duty to provide prompt and appropriate medical assistance to any person in a medical emergency (including a surgical emergency).
- 1.10 Take steps to minimise risk and ensure your care does not harm the health or safety of health consumers.

Principle 2 – Identify and respect the cultural needs and values of health consumers

Standards

- 2.1 Practise in a way that respects each health consumer's identity and right to hold personal beliefs, values and goals.
- 2.2 Assist the health consumer to gain appropriate support and representation from those who understand the health consumer's first-language, culture, needs and preferences.
- 2.3 Consult with members of cultural and other groups as requested and approved by the health consumer.
- 2.4 Reflect on and address your own practice and values that impact on care in relation to the health consumer's age, ethnicity, culture, beliefs, gender and gender identity, sexual orientation and/or disability.
- 2.5 Work in partnership with Māori health consumers and their whānau/family to improve health outcomes and promote health equity.
- 2.6 Understand Māori health inequalities and pay particular attention to the health needs of the community where you practise.
- 2.7 Ensure care is culturally appropriate and acceptable to Māori health consumers and their whanau/family and is underpinned by the recognition that iwi, hapū and Māori are diverse.
- 2.8 Acknowledge and respond to the identity, beliefs, values and tikanga (practices) held by local iwi, hapū and Māori and incorporate these into paramedic care.
- 2.9 Integrate kaupapa and mātauranga Māori models of health into everyday practice and when developing care plans (when appropriate).
- 2.10 Promote access to services which meet the needs of Māori health consumers.

Principle 3 – Work in partnership with health consumers to promote health equity and protect their well-being

Standards

- 3.1 Explain and share information with health consumers that they want and/or need. Give health consumers information that is honest and accurate in a way they can understand and invite questions.
- 3.2 Respect health consumers' rights to participate in decisions about their care and involve them and their whānau/families where appropriate in planning care. The concerns, priorities and needs of the health consumer and whānau/family must be elicited and respected in care planning.
- 3.3 Support and respect the contribution health consumers make to their own care and well-being.
- 3.4 Meet health consumers' language and communication needs where reasonably practicable.
- 3.5 Where a health consumer is not competent to make an informed choice and give informed consent, you must ensure the care you give is in the best interests of the health consumer and that you have taken reasonable steps to ascertain their views.¹
- 3.6 Respect health consumers' right to complain and respond by working with them to resolve the issue.
- 3.7 Understand Māori health inequalities and advocate for, and assist, health consumers to access the appropriate level of health care.
- 3.8 Use your expertise and influence to promote the health and well-being of vulnerable health consumers, communities and population groups.

Principle 4 – Maintain health consumer trust by providing safe and competent care

Standards

- 4.1 Use appropriate care and skill when assessing the health needs of health consumers, and planning, implementing and evaluating their care.
- 4.2 Be readily accessible to health consumers and colleagues when you are on duty.
- 4.3 Keep your professional knowledge and skills up to date.
- 4.4 Recognise and work within the limits of your competence and your scope of practice.²
- 4.5 Ask for advice and assistance from colleagues especially when care may be compromised by your lack of knowledge or skill.
- 4.6 Reflect on your own practice and evaluate care with colleagues.
- 4.7 Deliver care based on best available evidence and best practice.
- 4.8 Keep clear and accurate records (see Guidance: Documentation below).
- 4.9 Administer medicines and health care interventions in accordance with legislation, your scope of practice and established standards or guidelines.
- 4.10 Practise in accordance with professional standards relating to safety and quality health care.
- 4.11 Render prompt and appropriate clinical care to any person.

Guidance: Documentation

- Keep clear and accurate records of the discussions you have, the assessments you make, the care and medicines you give, and how effective these have been.
- Complete records as soon as possible after an event has occurred.
- Ensure any entries you make in health consumers' records are clearly and legibly signed, dated and timed.
- If a change or addition needs to be made to a record ensure that the amendment is timed, dated and identified (signed) correctly.
- Ensure any entries you make in health consumers' electronic records are clearly attributable to you.
- Ensure all records are kept securely.

² Registered paramedics working in an advanced scope must provide health services that are consistent with their education and assessed competence, meet legislative requirements and are supported by appropriate standards.

Principle 5 – Respect health consumers’ privacy and confidentiality

Standards

- 5.1 Protect the privacy of health consumers’ personal information.
- 5.2 Treat as confidential information gained in the course of the paramedic-health consumer relationship and use it for professional purposes only.
- 5.3 Use your professional judgement so that concerns about privacy do not compromise the information you give to health consumers and their family/whānau or their involvement in care planning.
- 5.4 Inform health consumers that it will be necessary to disclose information to others in the health care team.
- 5.5 Gain consent from the health consumer to disclose information. In the absence of consent a judgement about risk to the health consumer or public safety considerations must be made.³
- 5.6 Store health records securely and only access or remove them for the purpose of providing care.
- 5.7 Access and disclose health consumers’ personal or health information only as necessary for providing care.
- 5.8 Maintain health consumers’ confidentiality and privacy by not discussing health consumers, or practice issues in public places including social media. Even when no names are used a health consumer could be identified.⁴

Guidance: Confidentiality and privacy in the health context

- Confidentiality and privacy are related but distinct concepts. Any health consumer information learned by a paramedic during the course of treatment must be safeguarded by that paramedic. Such information may only be disclosed to other members of the health care team for health care purposes. Confidential information should be shared only with the health consumer’s informed consent, when legally required or where failure to disclose the information could result in significant harm. Beyond these very limited exceptions the paramedic’s obligation to safeguard such confidential information is universal.
- Privacy relates to the health consumer’s expectation and right to be treated with dignity and respect. Effective paramedic-health consumer relationships are built on trust. The health consumer needs to be confident that their most personal information and their basic dignity will be protected by the paramedic. Health consumers will be hesitant to disclose personal information if they fear it will be disseminated beyond those who have a legitimate “need to know”. Any breach of this trust, even inadvertent, damages the particular paramedic-health consumer relationship and the general trustworthiness of the profession of paramedicine.

³ Refer to Privacy Commissioner (2008), Health Information Privacy Code 1994 and Commentary (2008 edition) for more information.

⁴ This caution applies to social networking sites, e.g. Facebook, blogs, emails, Twitter and other electronic communication mediums.

Principle 6 – Work respectfully with colleagues to best meet health consumers' needs

- 6.1 Treat colleagues with respect, working with them in a professional, collaborative and co-operative manner. Recognise that others have a right to hold different opinions.
- 6.2 Acknowledge the experience and expertise of colleagues and respect the contribution of all practitioners involved in the care of the health consumer.
- 6.3 Communicate clearly, effectively, respectfully and promptly with other paramedics and health care professionals caring for the health consumer and when referring or transferring care to another health professional or service provider.
- 6.4 Ensure behaviour towards colleagues is always respectful and does not include dismissiveness, indifference, bullying, verbal abuse, harassment or discrimination. Colleagues should not be discussed in public places or on social media. This caution applies to social networking sites, e.g. Facebook, blogs, emails, Twitter and other electronic communication mediums.
- 6.5 Do not undermine health consumers' trust in the care of colleagues or health providers by malicious or unfounded criticisms.
- 6.6 Work with your colleagues and your employer to monitor the quality of your work and maintain the safety of those in your care.
- 6.7 Support, mentor and teach colleagues and other members of the health care team, especially students and those who are inexperienced.
- 6.8 When you delegate activities to others, ensure they have the appropriate knowledge and skills, and know when to report findings and ask for assistance.
- 6.9 Intervene to stop unsafe, incompetent, unethical or unlawful practice. Discuss the issues with those involved. Report to an appropriate person at the earliest opportunity and take other actions necessary to safeguard health consumers.
- 6.10 Use a recognised ethical code or framework to assist you and your colleagues in ethical decision making.

Principle 7 – Act with integrity and authenticity to achieve health consumers' trust

- 7.1 Be open and honest in your interactions with health consumers.
- 7.2 Protect vulnerable health consumers from exploitation and harm.⁵
- 7.3 Act promptly if a health consumer's safety is compromised.
- 7.4 Act immediately if a health consumer has suffered harm for any reason. Minimise further harm and follow organisational policies related to incident management and documentation. A full and prompt explanation should be made by the appropriate person to the health consumer concerned and, where appropriate, their family about what has occurred and the likely outcome.
- 7.5 Act in ways that cannot be interpreted as, or do not result in, your gaining personal benefit from your professional position.
- 7.6 Be aware that accepting gifts, favours or hospitality⁶ may compromise the professional relationship with a health consumer. Gifts of more than a token value could be interpreted as the paramedic gaining personal benefit from his/her position, the paramedic taking advantage of a vulnerable health consumer, an attempt to gain preferential treatment, or an indicator of a personal or emotional relationship.
- 7.7 Declare any personal, financial or commercial interest which could compromise your professional judgement.
- 7.8 Respect the possessions and property of health consumers in your care.
- 7.9 Maintain a professional boundary between yourself and the health consumer and their partner and family/whānau, and other people nominated by the health consumer to be involved in their care.
- 7.10 Do not ask for or accept loans or bequests from a health consumer or anyone close to a health consumer.
- 7.11 Do not enter into a business agreement with a health consumer or former health consumer that may result in personal benefit.
- 7.12 Do not act for health consumers in your care through representation agreements nor accept power of attorney responsibilities to make legal and financial decisions on behalf of health consumers.
- 7.13 Ensure that you do not act in ways that could result in, or be interpreted as resulting in, personal benefit from your paramedic position.

⁵ Also refer to the amendments to the Crimes Act 1961 that place an obligation on people who have care of a vulnerable adult or child and make it an offence to fail to protect a child or vulnerable adult from risk of death or grievous bodily harm or sexual assault. Refer to sections 151, 152, 195 and 195A.

7.14 Do not engage in sexual or intimate behaviour or relationships with health consumers in your care or with those close to them.

Guidance: Professional Boundaries

- Maintain professional boundaries in the use of social media. Keep your personal and professional lives separate as far as possible. Avoid online relationships with current or former health consumers. Do not use social media or electronic communication to build or pursue relationships with health consumers.
- Text messaging may be an appropriate form of professional communication, e.g., confirmation of upcoming visits, etc. Paramedics must be aware of professional boundaries and ensure communication via text is not misinterpreted by the health consumer or used to build or pursue personal relationships.
- You should seek the reassignment of care, if feasible, of health consumers with whom you have a pre-existing, non-professional relationship. Any complaint about a relationship between a paramedic and a health consumer would always be considered in the context of the professional relationship including whether it was an ongoing professional relationship and whether there was a power imbalance between the parties as a result of the professional relationship.
- It is usually considered unethical to accept gifts – monetary or otherwise – from your health consumers. Financial dealings with health consumers are generally unacceptable.

Principle 8 – Maintain public trust and confidence in the paramedic profession

Standards

- 8.1 Maintain a high standard of professional and personal behaviour. The same standards of conduct are expected when you use social media and electronic forms of communication.
- 8.2 Respect the property and resources of your employer. Maintain high standards of professional behaviour in your relationship with your employer. Adhere to organisational policy and standards that protect public safety.
- 8.3 Accurately represent the nature of the service or the care you intend to provide. Do not claim to be a practising paramedic if you do not hold a current practising certificate.
- 8.4 Document and report your concerns if you believe the practice environment is compromising the health and safety of health consumers.
- 8.5 Report to your employer or regulatory authority if you believe the health, competence or conduct of a colleague will compromise public safety or bring the profession into disrepute.
- 8.6 Do not compromise your practice by the use of alcohol or drugs.
- 8.7 Meet your responsibility to maintain your health and well-being, and to seek assistance if your health threatens your ability to practise safely.
- 8.8 Ensure you only claim benefits or remuneration for the time you were employed or provided paramedicine services.
- 8.9 If you take part in research do so in accordance with recognised guidelines and do not violate your duty of care to the health consumer.

Guidance: Professional Misconduct

- The grounds on which a paramedic may be disciplined are stated in section 100 of the Act. A paramedic may be disciplined if the Health Practitioners Disciplinary Tribunal finds the paramedic guilty of professional misconduct because of an act or omission that amounts to malpractice or negligence, or she or he has brought, or is likely to bring, discredit to the profession.
- Other grounds for discipline under the Act are if the paramedic is convicted of an offence that reflects adversely on his or her fitness to practise, practising without a practising certificate, or practising outside his or her scope of practice or the conditions included in his or her scope of practice.

Guidance: Fitness to Practise and Public Confidence

- If you undertake unlawful or unethical actions in your personal life, they will reflect adversely on your fitness to practise (and be of concern to the Council and other agencies) or may bring discredit to the profession.
- Other behaviour may not lead to criminal or regulatory disciplinary proceedings but may be a matter of public confidence, i.e. it might reduce the trust that an individual health consumer has in you or reflect badly on the profession as a whole.

Guidance: Escalating Concerns

- You have an ethical obligation to raise concerns about issues, wrongdoing or risks you may have witnessed, observed or been made aware of within the practice setting that could endanger health consumers or others. Put the interests of health consumers first.
- If you are unsure, seek advice from a senior colleague or professional organisation.
- Raise your concerns with colleagues or other members of the team if they are contributing to your concerns.
- Formally raise your concerns with your manager or a senior person within your employment situation. Escalate your concerns to a higher level within your employing organisation if the issue is not resolved.
- If your efforts to resolve the situation within the workplace continue to be unsatisfactory, escalate your concerns to another body, e.g. Ministry of Health, Health and Disability Commissioner, Paramedic Council or other health professional regulatory authority.⁷

⁷ Refer to Office of the Ombudsmen, A guide to the Protected Disclosures Act, for general information about the Protected Disclosures Act (sometimes called the “whistle-blowing” legislation). It describes what protected disclosures are, who can make protected disclosures when disclosures are protected and the role of an Ombudsman.

Glossary

Accountability	Being answerable for your decisions and actions.
Collaborate	Work together and co-operate with each other.
Competence	The combination of skills, knowledge, attitudes, values and abilities that underpin effective performance as a paramedic.
Colleagues	Includes other paramedics, students, other health practitioners/workers and others lawfully involved in the care of the health consumer.
Culture	The beliefs and practices common to any particular group of people.
Cultural safety	Effective paramedic practice and care of a person or family/whānau from another culture, and is determined by that person or family. Culture includes, but is not restricted to, age or generation, gender and gender identity, sexual orientation, occupation and socio-economic status, ethnic origin or migrant experience, religious or spiritual belief, and disability. The paramedic delivering the paramedic care will have undertaken a process of reflection on their own cultural identity and will recognise the impact their personal culture has on their professional practice. Unsafe cultural practice comprises any action which diminishes, demeans or disempowers the cultural identity and well-being of an individual.
Family	Determined by the health consumer and used to represent those persons who play an important role in the health consumer's life.
Fitness to practise	Standards of behaviour in the professional role and outside of work which, if not adhered to, would indicate the paramedic may harm a health consumer.
Health assessment	A comprehensive assessment of a consumer's health status for the purposes of planning or evaluating care. Data is collected through multiple sources, including, but not limited to, communication with the consumer and, where appropriate, their significant others, reports from others involved in providing care to the consumer, health care records, direct observation, examination and measurement, and diagnostic tests. The interpretation of the data involves the application of paramedic knowledge and judgement. Health assessment also involves the continuous monitoring and reviewing of assessment findings to detect changes in the consumer's health status (ANMC, 2007).
Health consumer	An individual who receives paramedic care or services. This term represents patient, client, resident, or disability consumer. This term is used in the Health Practitioners Competence Assurance Act (2003).

Legislative requirements	The requirements laid down by Aotearoa New Zealand acts and regulations.
Paramedic	A person who is registered under the Health Practitioners Competence Assurance Act 2003 in any of the Paramedic scopes of practice
Paramedic practice	Using paramedicine knowledge in a direct relationship with clients or working in paramedicine management, paramedicine administration, paramedicine education, paramedicine research, paramedicine professional advice or paramedicine policy development roles, which impact on public safety.
Practising certificate	A renewable certificate issued by the Paramedic Council, which entitles a paramedic to practise for the period specified.
Public confidence	The public's trust in individual paramedics and the paramedic profession.
Social media	Internet or web-based technologies that allow people to connect, communicate and interact in real time to share and exchange information
Te Tiriti o Waitangi	Te Tiriti o Waitangi is regarded as one of the founding documents of government in Aotearoa New Zealand. "Te Tiriti forms the foundation for government on the basis of protections and acknowledgement of Māori rights and interests within the context of a shared citizenry" (Cabinet Office, 2019).
Vulnerable consumers	Consumers at risk of having their rights or health needs unmet. For example, they may have a restricted ability to communicate, may not be able to read or write, have an intellectual disability or brain injury or dementia, be a child or older person, be from another culture or have English as a second language, or be socially isolated.
Whānau	Family, extended family, family group, a familiar term of address to a number of people. In the modern context the term whānau is sometimes used to describe friends who may not have any kinship ties to other members.
